About the Film: ‘Astu’ which is Sanskrit mean “So Be It”, directed by Sumitra Bhave has won critical acclaim and has been screened at many international film festivals. The film (in Marathi, with English subtitles) is about Alzheimer’s disease, and its devastating consequences on the individual’s intellect as well as every aspect of the life of family and care providers. The film focuses on the changing dynamics between a father who is gradually losing his memory, and his daughter, who becomes his caretaker.

Dr. Mohan Agashe is a Professor of Psychiatry at B.J. Medical College in Pune India, and a noted actor, director and producer. His film credits include roles in Richard Attenborough’s Oscar Winning ‘Gandhi’ (1982), Mira Nair’s acclaimed Mississippi Masala (with Denzel Washington), and several award winning Bollywood films.
